Current F-1/J-1 Students and Scholars

Students and scholars may travel internationally during scheduled university breaks. However, international travel remains fluid, and new restrictions could arise at any time. Students and scholars returning to the United States after a temporary break should ensure they have the required documents to reenter the country.

In addition, per U.S. Department of State regulations, J-1 scholars are not permitted to travel outside of the United States for more than 30 days at a time.

Before departing and reentering the United S arefully and refer to We Are USC's FAQ on executive order migration.
